06 December 2017 | Global
Guides

Inside Construction and Infra is Herbert Smith Freehills' magazine for those involved in designing, procuring, building, owning or operating fixed assets.

We are pleased to present our second issue, which offers our perspectives on global construction and infrastructure disputes.

Please download it for free from the top of this page.

2017 has seen many developments in global construction and infrastructure, in many cases driven by political agenda, notably via China's belt and road initiative, which we explore within.

Also inside, we examine:

- High speed rail projects
- Infrastructure trends and opportunities in Latin America
- NEC 4 contracts

Inside Construction and Infra showcases the expertise of our leading construction and infrastructure disputes lawyers, as they apply their expertise in that sector. The publication offers fresh perspectives on this rapidly changing industry, identifying current market trends and giving personal insights from our practitioners across the globe.

When disputes arise, our team has the experience and industry knowledge that is required to achieve the optimum outcome for our clients on complex, high value and often multi-jurisdictional disputes and all types of construction claims. We hope that Inside Construction and Infra will help our clients choose lawyers who truly understand their industry and their business and with whom they can build a successful and effective relationship.
