Herbert Smith Freehills has been named “PPP Law firm of the Year” for the third time in five years at the prestigious Russian National Infrastructure Awards (ROSINFRA). The award ceremony took place on 28th of September 2020 at the PPP Week Congress in Moscow.

The ROSINFRA infrastructure awards is organised annually with the support of the Russian Government and recognises leaders in the infrastructure sector. It aims to identify key trends in infrastructure development in Russia and replicate best practices. The awards is a unique event in Russia, bringing together key market players from among investors, governmental authorities, financial bodies and consulting firms and highlighting the best infrastructure projects in different sub-sectors, including transport, IT, social, utilities and healthcare.

Head of Infrastructure and PPP for Russia, Olga Revzina commented: “This recognition is very valuable to us as the ROSINFRA awards are highly competitive and are based on feedback from the professional infrastructure community and our clients. It is testament to the incredible year the firm has had, hard work and unparalleled commitment of our lawyers to meet clients' high demands. I would like to thank my team members for their contribution and clients for their continued trust in us.”
