

IBOR TRANSITION: TRANSACTIONAL

USING RFRS IN NEW FINANCIAL PRODUCTS

For new transactions, the regulatory pressure to offer new financial products referencing near risk-free rates rather than LIBOR has been maintained, notwithstanding the shorter term relaxation of the interim milestones during the global pandemic.

Our finance and capital markets teams will combine their strong understanding of LIBOR with their hands-on experience of supporting clients in documenting RFR transactions to help you navigate the transactional challenges which will arise in a post-LIBOR world.

To find out more about the key product-specific IBOR issues you should consider when accessing the financial markets, please click below.
