EXPERIENCE

Peter advises major corporate and government clients on large and complex matters that demand a creative, strategic and commercial approach to environment and planning issues.

He assists clients with obtaining all planning, environment and regulatory approvals for major energy, resource, infrastructure and urban development projects by providing strategic and integrated land access and approvals advice. He also provides advice and representation in relation to the remediation and development of contaminated land and has advised on some of Australia's most complex and high profile contaminated sites.

Peter also advises clients on planning law, pollution, heritage, and biodiversity issues as well as environmental incident response, crisis management, regulatory investigations and defence of environmental prosecutions. He conducts specialist litigation including environment and planning, real estate, compulsory acquisition and valuation disputes.
