HELPING DEFENCE AND SECURITY ORGANISATIONS ACHIEVE THEIR MISSION

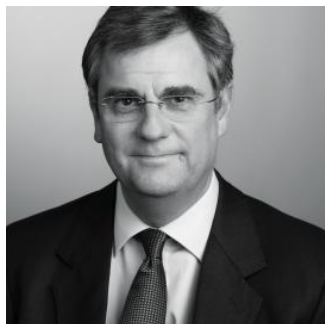

In a world where the old certainties no longer apply, the work of defence and security organisations becomes ever more challenging.

Government organisations are confronted with new threats to security while facing continuing economic and fiscal uncertainty. Private sector organisations need to maintain growth against the background of falling spending by their traditional customers, requiring them to find new global markets. Technological developments keep are key to maintaining advantage, and cyber security becomes ever more crucial.

Both Government and private sector clients trust us to work on their most complex, sensitive and high-profile projects and transactions, given our extensive experience of advising in the sector and our understanding of the issues and nuances which arise.

For each transaction we provide a customised multi-disciplinary team of experts with deep experience of the sector and the relevant geographies. We help our clients to reach informed, commercial solutions across all defence matters, including policy-driven transformation exercises, the reorganisation of defence activities, equipment and support procurements, offset arrangements, public private partnerships, projects to renew defence infrastructure, joint ventures and public and private acquisitions.

Our extensive work with both Government and private sector clients means we can deploy existing learning and structures to new projects and transactions, and can often help to promote understanding and bridge the expectations gap between public and private sectors.
